Centractors To-Day Withdraw from the Amalgamation.

The game-of freeze-out between the cloak contractors and striking cloakmakers reached an exciting stage to-day, and both des scored what each consider are important points. The contractors at their headquarters, at Liberty Hall, on East Houston street, announced this morning that they had withdrawn from the amalgamation with the operators, which was formed during the received after that hour will be eligible from exhaustion.

The contractors insist that they cannot pay the increase of 25 per cent, demanded by the operators and live. If the operators are content to work at the present schedule of prices, by which, it is claimed, many of them last week were able to carn $29 and $30, well and good.

"But if they are not satisfied with these wages," said a prominent contractor this merping, "we shall hire anybody and everyody that we can find.

"Of course, it will be a little hard to get hands at first, but we shall begin to instruct girls in the work and employ them as soon as they are competent to do the work.

"Even now we can engage regular coat hands for $18 or $19 a week who will do more and better work than these operators who want the earth."

When they had left the shop Mr. Frank says that he picked up four of the garments and found that they had been literally cut into ribbons with shears.

The garments were being made for Julius Stein & Co. and were valued at $60. which lose will fall upon Mr. Frank.

He reported the affair to Barondess who told him to bring the garments to him and he would pay him for them.

At the contractors' headquarters he was advised to have the offenders arrested.

Over 1,000 operators are now on strike. The principle manufacturers who are affected by their ideness are Mever Jonasson & Co., Caspary & Berljamin, A. Friedlander & Co., Simonson & Weiss, Blumenthal Bros, and Gold-mith & Wurzburger.

It was said this morning that there was a possibility of the present difficulty rivalling that of a few weeks ago.

At present the outside operators are on strike, but in case the manufacturers support the contractors in their employment of non-union operators a strike of the inside operators is simest inevitable.

Both parties claim to have the support of the manufacturers, and it is a matter of the manufacturers would support the contractors in their employment of the manufacturers, would support the contractors in the face of a general strike.

The latter claim, however, that the manufacturers are not particularly friendly to Barondess.
